THE WESTSIDE
IS PREEMINENTLY
THE MANTLE AND JACKET HOUSE
OF THE PROVINCE.

We have no hesitation is saying that our stock of Mantles, Jackets, Capes and Waterproofs is the largest and best assorted in the city. Our sales in this department so far for this fall have been of a most satisfactory nature, thereby assuring us that our efforts are appreciated. We would like every lady in Victoria, whether intending to purchase or not, to visit our showroom, get quotations and compare prices with those of any other store, even if they do pretend to sell at cost. These goods are purchased direct from the manufacturers, and we can afford to sell them at from 25 to 30 per cent. cheaper than houses that have to pay several intermediate profits.

American Dispatches.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—It is reported that a second section of the westbound vestibuled express on the Detroit division of the Wabash road, due in this city at 7:15 a.m., met with an accident near Kingsbury, Indiana, this morning, in which 50 persons were killed. The officials of the company admit that there has been an accident, but profess ignorance of the details. Kingsbury is 62 miles east of this city. The accident was caused by a brakeman on a freight train turning the switch to let the freight train, outside of the track of the first section of the passenger train, pass, and just before the arrival of the second section. A relief train was immediately sent to the scene of the wreck. All the neighboring towns were called on for physicians. It is said ten bodies have been taken out. The wounded are being cared for in neighboring farm houses. It is believed there are still 40 bodies to be removed.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 22.—Superintendent Smith, of the Union depot, says there were no Detroit people on the wrecked train. The second section was made up at 12th street, entirely from the Grand Trunk connection. The Grand Trunk train was No. 11 from the east and Canada, arriving at Detroit at 9:30 last night. It is now known that Engineer Whitman of the freight train was killed. The Wabash people here have but meagre details of the wreck at Kingsbury. The train ran into a freight which was standing on the siding, and the wreck was a bad one. All that is known definitely is that Conductor Coulter of Detroit and Engineer Ashley were killed. The officials acknowledge that a number of others are dead. There is only one wire to Kingsburg.

Kingsbury, Ind., Sept. 22.—Among the killed in the Wabash accident are: Chas. Berbo, of San Francisco, and Warren G. Rider of Phoenix, Arizona. Injured are: Miss Hattie Hutchins, Phoenix, Arizona, bruised about the head and internally injured; H. W. Rider, Phoenix, Arizona, not serious; Frank P. Dow, Fairhaven, Washington, face cut, hip dislocated; Miss Hattie Rogers, Phoenix, Arizona, left leg injured.

VALKYRIE ARRIVES

Lord Dunraven's Trim Little Craft Safely at Anchor

AFTER A MOST TEMPESTUOUS VOYAGE

Storms and Gales Accompanied Across North Atlantic.

Some of the Head Sails Carried Away—Scudding Under Storm Staysails—Two Hundred and Twenty-Five Miles the Best Day's Run—Forty Miles the Lowest—Her Interesting Log.

Sandy Hook, N. J., Sept. 22.—The sloop yacht Valkyrie, in tow of a tug, was sighted off Scotland lightship this morning. She is now anchored in the bay.

Quarantine, L. I., Sept. 22.—The Valkyrie's time across from Southampton was 30 days. She had westerly winds in the channel before passing Scilly, and three days light winds and calms, then for five days light east winds. North winds and south winds at times blew a hard gale with very heavy head seas. One of these gales blew away the jib and first trysail, and she was obliged to set storm staysails, otherwise she received no damage. She took the northerly passage and on the whole experienced very stormy weather. Capt. Cranfield of the Valkyrie confirms the report of Capt. Griffiths of the steamer Spain, having passed her on the evening of the 16th. Upon arrival at Quarantine she was promptly inspected, and then proceeded to her anchorage off Bay Ridge. On Sept. 16th, at 5:30, latitude 41.40, longitude 64.10, the Valkyrie passed a large vessel bottom up, coppered, but too far off to make out her name and nationality.

New York, Sept. 22.—The log of the Valkyrie shows a stormy passage most of the way across. Some days the record was over 200 miles. On August 27th, from noon to noon of the 28th, she logged 225 miles; September 1st she made 220. The lowest day's run was forty miles.

WEEKS DEFENDS HIMSELF.

The Alleged Embezzler Speaks Upon His Financial Troubles.

San Jose, Costa Rica, Sept. 22.—Francis Henry Weeks, the alleged New York embezzler, has made a statement refuting the charges of fraud made against him. He says his assignments to his personal assignees, W. G. Wiley for New York and Charles S. Lincoln for Wisconsin, were made without preference. "For the benefit of my clients and creditors I transferred all my real estate and every dollars' worth of personal property to my assignees. In doing this I retained nothing. I had with me when I left New York just sufficient money to pay the travelling expenses of myself and wife, and I state broadly and unequivocally that I have no funds in my own or any other person's name on which I can draw anywhere. It will be time enough when I get back to America to refute the charges of my misdoings as published. It would take too long to detect the claims filed with my assignee in this statement, but I take particular exception to the claim of Mrs. Cecil Bristed Griffith, through her lawyers, Charles C. Beaman and others, that I misappropriated $54,000, accrued interest on funds confided to me for investment. As to my assets they appear to be small, but if given the opportunity I will prove that my indebtedness is much less than appears in the published statement. What my course will be when the question of my extradition is less remote I cannot say. I am keenly alive to my legal responsibility to my clients. I maintain I am the victim of disastrous speculation in enterprises that were legitimate and promising. When the proper time comes I shall trust my lawyers and patiently abide the result; but I repeat that in no business transaction of mine was there any intent of fraud."

Affairs in Argentine.

Buenos Ayres, Sept. 22.—There was no improvement in the political situation in the Argentine republic yesterday. The revolutionists in the provinces of Cordova and San Juan tore up the railway tracks to prevent troops under General Pellegrini, who has been sent to restore order in these provinces, from reaching the scene of trouble. El Diario, in this city, has been compelled by the government to suspend publication for infringing the rules of the press censor.

Wanted to Follow Him.

Dover, N. H., Sept. 22.—Walter Hill and his cousin, Bertha Bennett, were lovers. They pledged their troth that in the event of the death of one the other would follow. Hill yesterday purchased a bottle of laudanum and drank half of its contents in the presence of his sweetheart and his mother. In a few hours he was a corpse. After the poison was taken away from him it was entrusted to a tenant in the other half of the house. The girl begged to see the bottle and partly to quiet her the request was granted. She suddenly grasped it and before those present could prevent her, drank a portion of its contents and now lies on a couch suffering intense agony. Her greatest distress, however, is secure for friends will not allow her to drink the rest of the poison, so she can join her lover. She threatens to take her life at the first opportunity.

One More Bank Collapse.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 22.—The stockholders of the Frankfort National Bank, by a vote of 700 to 80, decided yesterday to go into liquidation. The bank was organized in August, 1889, with a capital stock of $100,000. It did not have many depositors, which is attributed to the fact that a greater part of the stockholders were non-residents. The president and vice-president resigned in time to make private assignments. An officer of the bank says that neither the depositors nor stockholders will lose a cent. The loans amount to $126,400; deposits, $20,000; and these, added to capital stock, make a total indebtedness of $120,000, leaving $6400 for stockholders. The bank has paid in all three half-yearly dividends of 3 per cent.

OPPOSITION PROMISED.

Claus Spreckels Threatens to Make War on the New Australian Line.

Vancouver, Sept. 21.—The inauguration of the Canadian-Australian steamship line has resulted in some lively bidding for business by this concern as against the Oceanic Steamship Company of San Francisco, and the former has succeeded in securing considerable freight and not a few passengers from its older rival. This has apparently aroused the ire of Claus Spreckels, who has determined upon a rate war. To this end he has appointed Capt. William Webster, late manager of the Union Steamship Company of this city, Puget Sound and Canadian agent for the Oceanic company.

Canadian-Australian cuts will be met, and according to Capt. Webster the competition will likely result in the establishment of a direct line of steamers between British Columbia and Puget Sound ports and Australia. The Oceanic company expects to secure the bulk of Vancouver Island trade, basing their expectations upon dissatisfaction at present existing in Victoria over the refusal of the Warrimoo to land freight at that port on her last trip and the fact that the Board of Trade of Victoria passed red-hot resolutions against discrimination in favor of Vancouver by the new line. Victoria has some heavy importers with strong capital who control a large share of the trade of the province.

Duly Sworn In.

Ottawa, Sept. 22.—Senator Boyd was sworn in as lieutenant-governor of New Brunswick in the Privy Council chamber by McGee, clerk of the Privy Council to-day.

The Dog Fish Pest.

Halifax, N.S., Sept. 22.—Cape Breton fishermen, as well as their brethren in Nova Scotia, find the prosecution of the fisheries difficult this fall owing to the immense schools of dog fish on the coast. These fish frighten from shore other fish, destroy nets and trawls and ruin the fishing. Forty years ago dog fish were plentiful on this coast and were then of considerable commercial value. At that time fishermen with a suitable kind of hook, not available to-day, captured immense quantities of these fish. The oil taken from them was then worth 40 cents a gallon, and this was mainly used for illuminating purposes. To-day it is not worth more than 20 cents a gallon, therefore the fish are not sought after.

His Excellency's Escort.

Montreal, Sept. 22.—His Excellency, the Governor-General and Lady Aberdeen are expected to arrive in the city on Tuesday evening next. The Montreal troop of cavalry will form the escort, the Windsor and Victoria Rifles will form the guard of honor at the civic reception on Wednesday morning, and the Royal Scots the guard of honor at the board of trade opening in the afternoon, and the banquet at the Windsor in the evening.

Abandoned Among Strangers.

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 22.—Three weeks ago Dr. George Allen Black, dentist, of Maitland, sold off his office effects and suddenly left town. At the same time Mrs. Currie, wife of a well-to-do business man, left for a few days' visit to relatives at Truro, and her husband's sister in Halifax. She took her eldest child and a goodly sum with her. She left the child in Truro and then eloped with Dr. Black. Yesterday Mr. Currie received a letter from his erring wife dated Boston, saying she was sick and penniless, confessing her sin and imploring forgiveness. Dr. Black had abandoned her among strangers and gone off on a Sound steamer with another woman. The doctor recently narrowly escaped a coat of tar and feathers in another Nova Scotia village.

Toronto, Sept. 22.—Alexander D. McIsaacs, of Port Hood, was fatally kicked by a horse yesterday.

Death Rather Than Disgrace.

Montreal, Sept. 22.—Fred Campbell, junior member of the firm of Boyd, Ryrie & Campbell, wholesale stationers and paper dealers, of this city, killed himself last evening. A few days ago the books of the firm, which does an extensive business in Canada and the United States, were seized by a special officer of the Canadian customs department. The charge was that the firm had been for some time smuggling steel pens into the United States from Bedford, Quebec, near the border. Several thousand dollars' worth were said to have been supplied to New York and Boston dealers. The United States government traced the goods and found that they had been bought from this firm. Mr. Campbell did outside work for the firm. Last night at 8 o'clock he shut himself in his room and put a bullet through his heart. Death was instantaneous.

Mr. Campbell had been despondent lately over the difficulties his firm was in with the customs. Last evening he went to his home in company with John Robertson. The latter remained down stairs while Campbell proceeded upstairs to his brother's room. In a few minutes a report was heard, and on investigation Mr. Campbell was found dead in a closet. Beside him lay a breech-loading shot gun, the charge from which had passed through Mr. Campbell's heart. Mr. Campbell was well known in the city and was very popular.

Accidentally Shot.

Huntsville, Ont., Sept. 22.—On Tuesday last a young man named William Meredith, of the township of Franklin, while out with a gun, accidentally shot himself. The ball entered his left breast and evidently killed him instantly. The body was not found until yesterday.

The Showers Coming.

Brisbane, Sept. 22.—The Australian-Canadian steamship Mowera sailed for Victoria on Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 19.

EMPEROR FRANCIS

The Austrian Kaiser Congratulates His Soldiers.

THEIR DISCIPLINE WAS ADMIRABLE

He Has Entire Confidence in the Army's Efficiency.

Much Pleased With the Interest Taken By the Men in the Manoeuvres—They Appreciated the Object of the Annual Review—The Royal Hunting Party—Bombardment Not Resumed.

Vienna, Sept. 22.—Emperor Francis Joseph has issued an order which declares that he is entirely satisfied with the way the army manoeuvres near Guens, Hungary, which were concluded yesterday, were carried out. He praised the efficiency of the regular troops, and expresses his gratification at the good discipline shown by the soldiers and their manifest appreciation of the objects of the manoeuvres. The Emperor concluded by declaring that he has complete confidence in the army. Emperor William reached Mohals last night, to which place the imperial party has gone on a shooting expedition. After a short stop made at Mohalk, the royal sportsmen will proceed to Bogfok, which they will make their headquarters during their shooting excursion.

Bombardment Not Resumed.

London, Sept. 22.—A private telegram from Rio de Janeiro received here says the government troops still hold possession of the city. The vessels of the rebel fleet now in the harbor, cleared their decks for action and the drums beat to quarters early this morning, but the bombardment had not been renewed up to the time the dispatch was sent.

HASTY HUNTERS.

Sheep Mistaken For Deer—The Escape Of Maxum.

Nanaimo, Sept. 22.—Now that the shooting season has commenced complaints from the farmers, about the loss of their sheep, mistaken for deer, are numerous. Some persons have even gone so far as to shoot at their own neighbors', and when remonstrated with said, "I thought it was a deer." They had seen the foliage move, and without waiting to investigate had blazed away.

P. Brodie has sold his interest in the Nanaimo Bakery to G. M. Smart and E. Thorne.

E. Cook and Miss L. McCutcheon were married on Wednesday night at the home of the bridegroom.

The Cedar District Agricultural show promises to be a great success this year, and the competition will doubtless be keen.

A district lodge of the C.O.O.F.M.U., will be instituted in the Cedar district on next Friday evening by P.G.M. Edwards.

It is now believed that Maxum, the would-be murderer, has made his escape.

Burwell's Defalcations.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 22.—Business and social circles were shocked last evening on learning that Jules H. Burwell, vice-president, treasurer and general manager of Mast, Buford and Burwell Carriage Company, was charged with misappropriation of $70,000 of funds of the firm. The firm was forced into an assignment on Monday by the financial methods of Mr. Burwell, it is alleged. Victor Robinson was selected as assignee. The complaint charges that Burwell has been a member of the corporation for eight years, at a salary of $3000 a year, and as treasurer at times had access to the funds of the company. It states that Burwell, instead of taking the $3000 which was his rightful due, annually appropriated to his own use amounts far in excess of that sum. Of the amounts wrongfully taken, $40,000 is charged to have been taken in money and the value of the remainder in carriages and merchandise. The firm of Mast, Buford & Burwell therefore asks judgment against Jules H. Burwell for $70,000.

CITY IN JEOPARDY.

Scarcity of Water Causes a Scare—The Lumber Market.

Vancouver, Sept. 22.—A small fire broke out early this morning in McKay's paint shop, and owing to the failure of the city water supply much apprehension was felt, but the chemical engine extinguished the flames.

After five days' interruption the city water was turned on this afternoon.

The Van Winkle Bar Hydraulic company of Lytton report a wash up of $1500 for the last twenty days.

Moodyville sawmill has reopened. Mill men expect a better foreign market for lumber next year.

The Vancouver and New Westminster lacrosse teams will hold a meeting tomorrow about the trip to San Francisco. They expect to be able to pay their own way.

INSPECTION OF IMMIGRANTS.

Canadian Government Will Throw No Obstacles in the Way.

Washington, Sept. 21.—The conference between the representatives of the Canadian steamship lines and railroad companies and Secretary Carlisle and Superintendent Stump, representing the government of the United States, as to the inspection of immigrants coming into the United States from Canada, held at the treasury department this afternoon, resulted in an agreement being signed. In its main features the new compact follows, with only some slight changes, the tri-party draft arrangement which the Dominion authorities refused to sign. It provides:

1. That all immigrants destined for the United States shall be landed at the ports of Halifax, Quebec, Point Levis, Vancouver and Victoria, or such other ports as may be authorized by the Canadian government and advised to the party of the second part (the United States).

2. That all the facilities in the way of convenient access to immigrants and keeping of immigrants apart from the public until after the inspection shall be afforded to the immigrant inspectors of the United States, at the ports of landing, to enable them to make such an inspection as is required by the laws of the United States.

3. That the United States officers shall inspect all immigrants destined for the United States at the port of landing as speedily as possible, and will furnish a certificate of passport containing a personal description of said immigrant sufficient to identify him, signed by the officer of the United States upon the Canadian frontier, which shall entitle the said immigrant to enter the United States without further examination or hindrance.

4. That the steamship companies shall supply the United States inspectors at ports of landing, prior to the disembarkation of immigrants, a list of all immigrants, whether infant or adult, destined for the United States, containing the following information: Full name, age or sex, married or single, occupation; whether able to read or write, last place of residence and embarkation and destination; whether he has a through ticket or money to secure one; who paid his passage; whether or not going to join relatives, and where he expects to find employment.

5. That the railway and transportation companies will not, nor will either of them, sell to any immigrants en route to any part of the United States a ticket for his transportation, or transport him in cars or vessels from the port of landing until he has exhibited his certificate as herein provided, and said railroad and transportation companies will not knowingly transport any rejected or undesirable immigrant, or one who is by law prohibited from entering the United States, into its territory.

6. That for the purpose of defraying the expense to the United States government incident to such inspection, and for the care of such immigrants as may fall into distress or become a public charge in the United States, there shall be paid to an inspection office at the port of landing, to be designated by the United States superintendent of immigration, the sum of fifty cents for each immigrant admitted into the United States, to be paid by the transportation companies through the steamship company landing such immigrants, and this fee of fifty cents per capita shall be the only charge which shall be made for admission of such immigrants to the United States. This provision to go into effect thirty days after the approval and ratification of this agreement.

7. That the word "immigrant" when used in this agreement shall be understood to mean all persons who intend to remain in the United States who are not already citizens of the United States.

8. That all parties to this agreement shall in good faith perform all the obligations assumed by each as far as the same can be done without the violation of the positive rights of others over whom they have no control and the laws of the Dominion of Canada and of the United States.

This agreement is to go into effect immediately, and is signed on behalf of the different steamship companies, by Herman Stump, United States commissioner of immigration, and approved by Secretary Carlisle, and is to be put into effect with the tacit consent of the Canadian authorities. The statement was made by authority of the Dominion government, though no representative of that government was present, that the Dominion authorities would place no obstruction in the way of carrying out the agreement, but could not give their formal assent in writing. The conference lasted an hour and was harmonious throughout. Secretary Carlisle was most emphatic in his declaration that the United States would protect herself from undesirable immigrants.

LYNCHED BY A MOB.

A Southern Community Take Revenge on An Offending Negro.

Roanoke, Ga., Sept. 21.—Robt. Smith, the negro who assaulted Mrs. Henry Bishop yesterday, and in the riot over whom a number of citizens were shot, was hanged by a mob shortly before 5 o'clock this morning. While J. Allan Watts, Judge Woods and others were addressing the crowd last night Sergt. Griffin, with two policemen, took the negro from jail and out of town. They carried him across the river into the woods, but towards daybreak they were notified that crowds of men were scouring the adjacent country. They, therefore thought it best to bring their prisoner back to town and place him in jail. They were proceeding there when a squad of men, about 200 in number, rushed upon them and seized the prisoner. With shouts and yells the determined men took the negro to the nearest tree, and there he was hanged, his body being riddled with bullets and horribly mangled. It was all over by 5 o'clock and the small body of men who had done the work had dispersed. With the break of day crowds of people began to throng the streets leading to the scene of the latest tragedy. Dangling at the end of a small rope was the dead body of the negro. His face was bloody, distorted and swollen. A charge of shot had been fired into his back, literally tearing his coat to pieces. The rope was tied in a regulation hangman's knot and the negro's feet were well above the ground. Coroner Gray and a jury repaired early to the scene, and after viewing the body of the dead man rendered a verdict that the negro came to his death at the hands of persons unknown.

Fears for the safety of Mayor Trout and the determined men with him were freely expressed by their friends, as the indignation of the mob seemed especially directed towards him and the soldiers. While the crowd was making preparations for the second assault the militia were disbanded and went to their homes. Mayor Trout, who had been wounded in the foot by a pistol ball, was first carried to the Ponce de Leon hotel, but owing to the threats of the mob he was removed and taken to the country.

IRISH NATIONAL LEAGUE.

Rally of American Irish Called for Early Next Month.

New York, Sept. 22.—Whether any body or soul is left of what was once the strong and powerful Irish National League of America will be determined by the results of the convention that has been called by its officers to assemble in Chicago the first of next month. The recent anti-Gladstone manifesto issued from this city, which bore the names of the officers of the organization, has been repudiated by President Gannon, and his repudiation has been endorsed by the officers of the majority of the existing local branches of the league.

At the same time the anti-Gladstone sentiment seems determined to make itself felt, and the prospects are that the forthcoming convention, unless one or the other of the elements should prove to be in the overwhelming majority, will be one of the most boisterous in the history of Irish-American conclaves. The call for the convention is addressed to all the friends of Ireland, and natives of the Emerald Isle throughout the country who believe that the Grand Old Man has in his declining years done his level best to secure a settlement of the long-standing differences that have made Ireland a bone of contention in British affairs for many decades, are preparing to turn out in force.

According to advices the anti-Gladstone brigade is equally active, and the convention will resolve itself into either a grand Gladstonian ratification meeting or into a revolutionary congress that may result, so far as its influence is concerned, in setting back the ultimate independence of the good old soil for centuries to come.

Austrian Army Manoeuvres.

Gnens, Hungary, Sept. 21.—The army manoeuvres that have been in progress here and in the country hereabouts closed to-day and the palm of victory was awarded to the army of the north. In yesterday's manoeuvres the northern army assumed the offensive on a range of low lying hills between Frauenhied and Grosschwartzdorf. The battle front extended five miles. The southern army was compelled to retreat, its left flank having been turned by the northern army. The defeated force retired upon the line of the Pflandorf village, eight miles north of Gnens. To-day the northern army attempted to dislodge the southern army from the position it occupied on the heights of Loradorf and Cleigarten. The effort, however, was unsuccessful. The final movement in the battle, which ended at noon, was made by the command of Field Marshal von Reintander. The arbitrators decided that the advantage remained with the northern army, as it had outflanked its enemy. The men and horses are suffering extreme exhaustion. Numerous accidents occurred during the fighting. It is reported that two officers and several privates were killed. An accident happened to the 11th Hussars that would have been laughable had not many of the men and their horses been injured. The regiment received an order to advance upon the enemy. The bugle sounded the charge and the hussars moved forward at a gallop in splendid style. Suddenly horses and men were seen toppling over. They had come unawares upon a wide and deep ditch and went down as though their ranks were being swept with grape. Many of the regiment were seriously hurt. Only 30 men and horses emerged from the ditch in a condition to resume the charge

American Dispatches.

New York, Sept. 22.—Reports are current that the contract between the National Linseed Oil Company and the independent producers, which expired some four weeks ago, will be renewed during the coming week. The corporation and the independent concerns number about 40 each. Under the contract all fared well, but since the war was begun the product has fallen to 36 cents, which is about equal to the cost of production. Unless the outside companies are willing to come in the National Company will fight them to the finish.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—A fourth installment of ten per cent. on the debenture bonds of the World's Fair is being paid to-day at the local banks. The next installment will be a final one and if the attendance maintains its present figure for the balance of the World's Fair period the numerous stockholders scattered around the country will stand a good chance of securing a percentage of their holdings.

Albuquerque, N.M., Sept. 22.—A largely attended convention about equally divided as to sex opened here to-day for the purpose of organizing a territorial association auxiliary to the National Women's Suffrage Association. The chair was occupied by Mrs. Mamie E. Marble, who, in the course of an eloquent address said that it was more profitable and wise than necessary, in view of the probable near admittance of New Mexico to statehood, and also because of the influence and weight that political equality would give to the great silver question that the women of the territory should organize. The convention was attended with considerable enthusiasm, and resolutions bringing into existence a Woman's Suffrage Association were unanimously adopted.

Lewiston, Me., Sept. 22.—After thirty-nine years of constant service the resignation of President O. C. Henry, of Bates College, went into effect to-day. The resignation is based solely on the fact that the well known educator has devoted the entire period of an average man's life to the interests of the institution, and is now compelled to abandon active work.

Denver, Col., Sept. 22.—This was the day set for the opening of the second trial of Dr. Thatcher Graves for the murder of Mrs. Barnaby. By his own act, however, he has placed himself beyond the pale of human law, and the case has therefore been stricken from the docket of the circuit court.

While pills and other purgatives only relieve biliousness and react, leaving the victims more prone to sluggishness of the liver, Dr. Sheppard's Liver Lozenges cure positively and permanently.

Only Man Ever Killed by a Meteor.

To the writer's certain knowledge there is but one case on record where a human being has been killed by an aerolite or fall of meteoric stone. The fatality mentioned occurred in Whetstone township, Crawford county, Ohio, in 1875, and is recorded in the Bucyrus Journal as follows: "As David Misenthaler, the famous stockman, of Whetstone township, was driving his cows to the barn about daylight this morning he was struck by an aerolite and instantly killed. It appears as if the stone had come down from a direction a little west of south, striking the man just under or on the right shoulder, passing obliquely through him from the right shoulder to the left hip, burying the greater portion of his body under itself in the soft earth. The stone is about the size of a wooden water bucket, and appears to be composed of pyrites of iron."—Philadelphia Press.

WHY WOMEN FEAR MICE.

A Brief Essay in Which the Question is Not Answered.

As a woman, and I trust a brave one, a lover of animals and a student of natural history, I ask the vexed question in all seriousness, Why are women afraid of mice? Why should the sight (I had alost written the name) of a tiny, harmless, graceful little creature strike terror into the stoutest hearts that beat in feminine breasts? Echo answers "Why?" The fear of mice is a hereditary one, an inherited weakness, a fatal foe, which it is useless to combat, a foolish dread of which we ought to feel heartily ashamed, and yet it is a real and formidable terror. It is never assumed. It may be exaggerated by a fit of hysterics or a succession of piercing screams, but the genuine peur a faire fremir is there all the same, and why?

I remember once reading a story about a coterie of strong-minded women who gave a series of lectures upon female virtues in an old country town assembly room. One of their number was chosen to deliver the lecture on valor, and chose for her subject the history of Joan of Arc. But when the evening arrived and she was discoursing upon the valor of her sex in general a mouse ran across the platform and the lecturer and her strong-minded sisters jumped upon their chairs, catching their petticoats up in a manner not altogether picturesque. But I maintain tha the fear of mice has nothing whatever to do with the matter of real bravery, and that Joan of Arc would probably have clutched her petticoats in precisely the same manner.

A mouse in the chamber of Mazat would, I believe, have deterred Charlotte Corday from her dread purpose; and the tail of one popping opportunely from the carving of Tullia's chariot would have prevented her from driving over her father's corpse; and I could cite many instances in which mice might have changed the history of the world. Who can doubt that Cleopatra and the other swarthy Egyptian beauties held the sacred cat in special veneration on account of the part he played of ridding them of their pet aversion? Every one knows that if a cat has a weakness it is for a plump, well-matured mouse, and puss has, perhaps, for this reason earned the affections, because of gratitude, of our sex.

The story of a prisoner who was cheered in captivity by a mouse is familiar to us all—but the prisoner was a man. Equally familiar is the fable of the grateful mouse which gnawed the net—but again, the prisoner is said to have been a lion, not a lioness. I believe there is a mutual antipathy between them.

Most women have experienced the sensation. You are sitting alone reading, playing, writing, painting or working. Suddenly you instinctively feel a sensation of horror of some evil influence that is present, but as yet unseen.

You lift your eyes, you behold gliding over the carpet towards you, without noise, apparently without the trouble of walking, a mouse. It stops; it fascinates you. You drop your book, your music, your brush, your needle, whatever it may be, but you make no other sound. You feel your blood freeze and your limbs slowly paralyse; your heart stops beating, your breath ceases, a cold chill creeps over you. In your imagination you feel the soft touch of an army of mice running races over your face and hands and making nests in your back hair. You start to your feet * * * and then * * * well, women take these things so differently

Are women afraid of mice simply because it is born in them? There is no reason why we should be afraid of them, but the fact remains that we are, and I have long since resigned myself to the fact, as an evil for which there is no remedy.—London Woman.

Mothers and Babies.

Wise mothers of the present day have lost faith in the old systems and rules for nourishing infants. Medical science and a careful study of the principles of dietetics has done much to sweep away false ideas and notions of how a baby should be fed. An eminent medical writer says: "There can, I think, be no theory in regard to the diet of infants, except one founded upon a study of the composition of human milk and an attempt to imitate it."

Dr. J. M. Fothergill, of London, England, that great authority on the subject of infant feeding, declares that Lactated Food is the nearest and surest approach to mother's milk, and he places great value upon this valuable food as a nourisher and builder. The best medical writers on this continent who give special attention to infant dieting, are all agreed that Lactated Food is unsurpassed for building up and fortifying the weak system.

Mothers need not hesitate about using Lactated Food for their babies, seeing it has such strong recommendations. A full-sized tin will be sent free to any mothers who has not yet given this food a trial. Send full address to Wells & Richardson Co., Montreal.

The Lordly Legislators.

Harold Frederic's cable message about the House of Lords mustering for the debate on home rule may savor of exaggeration, but it really is truth plainly stated. Four-fifths of the peers pay no attention to legislative duties whatever and only exert their influence socially as country squires, shooting, fishing, following hounds, going to races, going about on visits, or living a life of ease in town. Legislatively their influence is slight, but assertion of power at critical moments is absurdly strong, and socially the awe and deference they inspire are ridiculously out of proportion to any merits they possess or any recognition they deserve. There are actually many peers who have never been in the House of Lords, at all from the day they took the oath and went through the quaint ceremonies of admission, somewhat resembling a beadle's procession. Joseph Cowen of Newcastle-on-Tyne once chatted with an elderly man in the House of Commons, who suddenly asked if it was the House of Lords. He had mistaken the chamber of the Commons for that of the peers, and as he had not been in the latter for many years his blunder was excusable. It is only when their privileges are in peril that their lordships bristle with virtuous indignation and assert their patriotism pugnaciously.

A Comrade's Estimate.

Over the familiar initials "T P." the following eloquent tribute to Mr. Blake's distinguished service in the cause of home rule appears in T. P. O'Connor's paper, the London Sun. The praise of a yokefellow is almost sincere:

The Irish party did honor to itself last night in doing honor to Mr. Blake. Of all the illustrious recruits which the Irish party have received since 1880, when it was first really organized, he is the most remarkable and the most valuable. And it is only his friends and colleagues who can fully appreciate either all the service he has given to the cause of Ireland or all the sacrifice it cost him to give that service. A man of the keenest family affections—happiest when surrounded by children and grandchildren—he has consented to lead for months the sombre and lonely life of a dweller in a land far removed from those nearest and dearest to him. And to a man of affections so ardent—of emotions so keen—such a separation must have brought many an hour of sadness and loneliness. Holding in his own country a position of unquestioned eminence, high in the respect and honor of all men, the undisputed chief of a great party for many years, he left it all to begin at the beginning and take his place in the rank and file of the Irish party.

Mr. Blake's own nature is too fine and too lofty to appreciate at its full value all there is of dignity in these sacrifices. But what he may not feel about himself, others are privileged to do and to note. His presence in the Irish party has not been notable only as a mere occasion of another honorable name. Mr. Blake is essentially a man of active and a most restless intellectual energy; a mind keen, subtle and highly trained, is ever at work analyzing with its extraordinary promptitude and eagerness all the questions of the hour. His fine and supple intellect has had the additional advantage of long training in official life and in parliamentary institutions, and thus Mr. Blake brought into the service of the Irish party not merely very great, but also very highly trained talents. All these he has placed freely at the service of his colleagues and of the land of his fathers. It adds to the generosity of the gift that the giver has known how to do all this unostentatiously—with no claim for special recognition—often with that spirit of self-effacement which is perhaps a higher, as it is often a more difficult testimony of patriotism than even the most eloquent speech.

In the private councils of the Irish party Mr. Blake's judgment, knowledge and genius have been especially valuable. I confess for myself that it was during an exposition by him I first grasped how there could be that distribution of powers which would leave Ireland self-governed, and at the same time maintain all the supremacy of the imperial parliament. Indeed, I can imagine few intellectual enjoyments keener—more delightful—than to listen to a constitutional exposition by Mr. Blake. His ideas and his thoughts are written large on the great settlement of the Irish question, which is now approaching its final stage in the house of commons. In the long discussion which took place in the form and framework of the settlement, Mr. Blake took a part more momentous than the annals of contemporary history will probably ever reveal. In the house of commons he has spoken when it was necessary, when it was a session—as I have already indicated—when an Irish member was required to advance the cause by his eloquence; the eloquence of silence was often the most potent and most patriotic of parliamentary weapons. But on the occasions when he did speak Mr. Blake rose to the level of the great hour, and few who heard will ever forget the admirable, the crushing, the overwhelming reply which he made to an elaborate speech of Mr. Chamberlain without a moment's preparation.

Finally, on all those questions of tactics, of policy and of personal claims, which are to be found in every party, Mr. Blake's breadth and serenity as well as kindness of judgment—his detachment by natural temper and by training from narrowing or personal views—have made him in hours of stress a most valuable and efficient, as well as generally accepted arbiter. On Sunday next he sails for a brief visit to his native land and to his home and family. The good wishes, the honor and the affection of his colleagues follow him there, and their welcome will be as enthusiastic and as kindly when he brings back to the Irish cause the inestimable service of his gifts and his character.

Electricity Applied to Farm Work.

An interesting example of electricity as applied to farm work is now in operation on a Scotch farm. The whole of the usual farm machinery, such as threshing and the like, are here driven by an electric motor. The electricity is generated by water power, the turbine wheel which drives the dynamo being about 100 yards from the farm. The electric current thus generated is conveyed by underground wire to the house and farm, in each of which a storage battery is placed. These supply the electric current for lighting and motive purposes when the machinery is not working. The whole of the mansion is illuminated by electric light, and an electric motor is now provided for pumping the water for domestic purposes. At the farm there is a large electric motor of 16 horse power, which is arranged to drive the farm machinery. This it does quite easily, as it works smoothly and quietly. It requires no governor, as the speed does not vary whatever the load may be. Another feature of interest is the ease and quickness of starting; there is no waiting to get up steam, as the motor is at once started by moving over the switch handle. There are many places where water power now running to waste could be utilized in a similar manner.—Mechanical News, New York.

Brain Work and Nervousness.

A famous French physician, De Fleury, says that Zola is exactly right in declaring that brain work is the best remedy for nervousness, sorrow and suffering. We cannot reproduce his scientific explanation of this theory, but some of the examples mentioned by him will lead our readers to look into the matter and study it for themselves, says the Atlanta Constitution. Victor Hugo appeared to be so much absorbed in his work that he was considered heartless or a man who would not be moved by any sorrow. The truth is, he was remarkably sensitive, and in order to save himself from the torture of his emotions he sought refuge in work. In this way he preserved his sanity and at the same time gave to the world masterpieces of literature.

De Fleury says that Hugo's case caused him to try the brain-work cure on his patients, men and women, who were suffering from various forms of nervousness. He put them interested in various studies and in correspondence, keeping accounts and litery work. In a short time they grew more cheerful. They were contented during the day and sleep came easily at night.

The Frenchman has called attention to a cure of great value. It is one that can be utilized without a physician or without going to a hospital or an asylum. Any nervous sufferer whose mind is dominated by a great sorrow has simply to devote himself in earnest to productive and useful brain work and the result will be a complete cure. It is worth trying.

THOMPSON vs. THOMPSON.

It suits Sir John Thompson now to tell his audiences that the Behring Sea award is a substantial victory for Canada and to draw away attention from the hampering regulations by dwelling upon that part of the judgment which deals with the question of jurisdiction. With this part of the premier's tactics there is less fault to find than with his attempts to leave wrong impressions on his hearers' minds in regard to the effect of the regulations themselves, to which we have already alluded. But Sir John is not altogether happy in his endeavor to show that Canada has reason to be pleased with the award. He is himself a witness against this contention, as the Ottawa correspondent of the Montreal Witness shows in a recent letter. As the premier's former opinions on the subject of regulations are given, along with other illustrative comments on the award, we take the liberty of reproducing the Witness' letter entire:—

Sir John Thompson has presumed to tell Mr. Laurier that the latter knew very little about the Behring Sea award because he ventured to criticise the premier's expression of satisfaction at the outcome. The premier dwells upon the victory achieved by Great Britain in the matter of international law, and he lightly passes over the regulations governing pelagic sealing. The furthest he will go is to say that they are too stringent. When Sir John Thompson, as a judge on the bench, sentenced a convict to be executed, the prisoner doubtless thought the sentence too stringent. As Sir Charles H. Tupper is claiming credit for Sir John Thompson in this matter as well as accepting credit himself, it is only fair to place on record the opinion of others as to the figure Canada cuts in the matter. In a letter the other day to the president of the Conservative association of North Grey, Sir Charles H. Tupper said: "It is no reflection upon Lord Hannen for me to express the opinion, as I do in all sincerity, that had it not been for the presence of a Canadian thoroughly informed upon the subject of seal life and upon the many facts connected with the prosecution of this industry on the Pacific ocean, and the other subjects which related peculiarly to the continent of America, pelagic sealing would have been absolutely prohibited and a serious blow would thus have been administered to the maritime interests of our Dominion in the west, as well as in the end, to the interests of the empire at large."

As the presence of Sir John Thompson upon the board of arbitration was thus the salvation of the sealers, as he thus leavened the whole mass, it is only fair to say that the most disgusted man at the result of the award is Sir John Thompson himself, although he will not admit it. It would be interesting, for instance, to have his opinion, as to what he thinks of the inclusion of three millions square miles of the Pacific ocean in the regulations governing Behring Sea seals.

While the award was a victory for Great Britain as a maritime nation, and for all the other maritime nations interested in the freedom of the high seas, English opinion nevertheless recognized the fact that Canada had come out at the small end of the horn and had been sacrificed. The London Saturday Review has this to say of the award: "It is said that the Hall of the Audience of the city of Grenada was adorned by a work of art, put up very disinterestedly as a warning to litigants. This picture represented a litigant in the state in which the devil appeared to a certain saint—or very nearly. He bore a roll of law papers in his hand, and nothing else; while a label bore the inscription saying, 'I have won and am in this state; beware of the law.' We are afraid that the Canadians will see in the Spanish suitor a not inaccurate representation of the condition in which they have been led by the Behring Sea arbitrators. They have won their case. The law is declared to be wholly in their favor. The claims of their opponents are dismissed and declared to be unfounded, while their own rights are adjudged to be beyond dispute. Nothing can be more satisfactory; but unhappily these rights are to be exercised under restrictions which may be found to deprive them of all their value. It was a matter of course that the arbitration should be quoted as a triumph for the cause of civilization. On that point all that we have to say is that it has certainly proved adequate to the occasion. Where two states do not want to fight, and the matter of dispute is not of vital importance, where those clients of one side who are directly interested are powerless to resist and the other side gain in substance all they hoped for, arbitration is a fairly good way of coming to an understanding. The United States is pleased to learn that the freedom of the sea is secured and that it will get the seals. If the Canadian fisherman complains that he gets nothing, it must be remembered that even the most eloquent and humane arbitrators cannot satisfy everybody."

So Sir John Thompson will see that public opinion in England itself is saying precisely what Mr. Laurier is condemned for saying.

The Colonies and India and American Visitor, London, Eng., the most intelligently edited of all colonial publications in England, in commenting on the regulations says that under the close season "the lessees of the rookeries can secure their full complement of skins without additional trouble, but their competitors afloat have their hunting season reduced from six to three (?) months in addition to being kept sixty miles from the Pribyloff islands. The prohibition of firearms still further curtails their chances of success. Under these circumstances the United States have practically secured the precise arrangement which Lord Lansdowne protested against on behalf of Canada in his dispatch of April 9th, 1888, to Lord Knutsford. * * * It rests with the United States to utilize their victory wisely."

Mr. Laurier, in venturing on a mild criticism in the direction pointed to by general public opinion, is sharply taken to task by Sir John Thompson for his alleged ignorance of the matter. These quotations show, if anything further were needed, that Mr. Laurier is not at all so ignorant on the subject as Sir John Thompson would lead his audience to believe.

Reverting to Sir John Thompson's strong objections to the inclusion of the Pacific ocean in the close season fixed by the arbitrators, it is interesting to quote from a minute of the council dated July 7th, 1888, which was probably drawn up by Sir John Thompson, in reply to a proposition to make a close season extend from April 15th to Nov. 1st. "It is noted," said Sir John Thompson, "that the area proposed by Mr. Bayard to be affected by the close season covers the whole portion of Behring Sea in which the exclusive right of sealing has during 1886-7 been practically maintained by the United States government. To this is added a part of the North Pacific ocean, north of 50 degrees of north latitude, and which commands the approach of the seals to the passes leading into Behring Sea. By the adoption of this area and close season the United States would gain by the consent what she has for two years held in defiance of international law and the protest of Great Britain and Canada."

Yet this area has not only been adopted by the arbitrators but enlarged down to the 35th degree of north latitude and covering an area of three million square miles of the Pacific ocean.

In this minute of council Sir John Thompson and Mr. Tupper go on to say: "The device, if successful, would perpetuate the rookeries on St. Paul and St. George's islands and add immensely to their value, while it cuts off at one blow the most valuable portion of the high seas from all participation by the sealers of the other nations. It is to be borne in mind that Canada's interest in this ndustry is a vital and important one; that she has a very large capital remuneratively employed in it, and that while by the proposed plan the other powers chiefly interested have their compensations, Canada has none. To her it would mean ruin, so far as the sealing industry is concerned. The method of taking seals by means of the net is not a destructive method, yet it is proposed to prohibit this as well. It appears, therefore, that what Mr. Bayard intends is to entirely prevent the killing of seals within the area proposed by any method and by any persons, except by the methods employed on the Pribyloff islands, and by citizens of the United States who may for the time being enjoy a monopoly of taking seals thereon. Against this unnecessary and unjust interference with, or rather prohibition of, rights so long enjoyed to a lawful and remunerative occupation upon the high seas, the government begs to enter their most earnest protest."

It will thus be seen that all along Sir John Thompson and Mr. Tupper have maintained that free pelagic sealing, along with the use of firearms and nets, were the inviolable right of Canadians, and they truly pointed out that restrictive regulations were merely a device for perpetuating a monopoly in the hands of United States citizens to the profit of the United States government, and they thought it only necessary to point out that the effect would be to ruin the Canadian government in order to convince the home government of the absurdity of the United States' contention respecting regulations. Notwithstanding this Lord Hannen, on behalf of the home government, assented to regulations in excess of anything ever proposed by Mr. Bayard, and now because Mr. Laurier protests that Canada ought not to be satisfied with regulations which Sir John Thompson a few years ago characterized as unjust and unnecessary, and in fact as prohibitory, he is told that he is ignorant of the effects of the award.

The Hamilton Spectator is busily engaged in trying to create prejudice against Mr. Laurier because of his being a French-Canadian. It never tires of calling him a "Frenchman" and of alluding to origin. This course is hardly worthy of a paper that professes to take a high stand with regard to politics, and it is foolish as well, for no sensible man is likely to bring objections against Mr. Laurier on account of his race any more than against Sir John Thompson on account of his religion. Besides, the Spectator should not forget the fact that but for Sir Hector Langevin's fall the Conservative party would have had a "Frenchman" for leader. What would the Spectator have done then?

An Indian named Gould brings news to Halifax of an extraordinary find of gold and silver on the shores of a river in Colchester county. The Indian states that while digging close to the water's edge, his pick struck a hard object about four feet below the surface. He soon discovered he had struck a bonanza in the form of gold and silver pieces. The gold pieces are of different sizes and shapes, some being about two inches square and over an inch thick. Among the lot are 50 silver pieces, about the size of an American silver dollar in circumference and about half an inch thick. The gold and silver pieces all bear inscriptions.

That Cariboo Telegram.

The telegram sent from Soda Creek purporting to give an account of a political meeting here two weeks ago, and the accuracy of which was so strongly denied by Mr. R. Borland, the chairman of the meeting, in a telegram published in these columns on Tuesday, is proving a thorn in the flesh of the premier, Mr. Davie. By the mail which arrived yesterday it seems that when the newspapers containing the telegram from Soda Creek reached Cariboo, there was a general indignation expressed at its deliberate falsification of the facts and the people did not hesitate to challenge Mr. Davie with having sent it himself, a charge which the honorable gentleman was not able to deny. If these things are done in the green tree what will be done in the dry? If the government is in such desperate straits when a by-election is taking place in a thinly populated district, what will happen to it when a general election is in progress? If the leader of the government stoops to such tricks as manufacturing bogus telegrams, what may be expected from those who are compelled by necessity to support him and whose livelihood depends upon the maintenance of his government? Surely the people of no province in the Dominion have been dragged through the mire as are those of British Columbia under the present so-called government.—News-Advertiser.

THREATEN TO STRIKE.

Bricklayers on Spring Ridge Drains Demand Competent Inspector.

At the special meeting of the council, held at 3 this afternoon, the sewerage committee reported in favor of the tender of McGregor and Jeeves for the Work estate surface drain. The tender was for $25,323. The report passed the council and the contract was accordingly awarded.

The question of security to be given by city officials was referred to the finance committee.

Ald. Belyea read a letter from the International Bricklayers' Union protesting against the continuance in office of Inspector Murray of the surface drains. The union alleged that he was incompetent and the bricklayers threaten to strike unless Murray be removed.

Ald. Belyea said that Murray had been appointed because he had had good testimonials and was supposed to be a competent man. The committee was instructed to inquire into the affair, and if Murray were found to be a competent man the council should stick by him whether the bricklayers struck or not. It appeared that the bricklayers wanted to dictate to the council.

Ald. Bragg defended the union. Murray was a carpenter, and that fact conflicted with the principles of the union, which required that a bricklayer hold the office that Murray held. The union did not wish to dictate to the council, but they maintained a principle.

Ald. Styles said Murray might be a good carpenter, but he was not a bricklayer. He recommended the employment of a bricklayer.

Ald. Robertson said that a bricklayer should have the job.

Ald. Baker also favored a bricklayer. Might as well send a shoemaker as a carpenter to superintend.

The council was in session at the time of going to press.

The Conductor's Punch.

Men who are old enough to have travelled on the cars thirty or forty years ago will remember that in those days the conductor's punch was like a shoemaker's punch, with a spring to keep the jaws open, and that it punched simply a round hole. There are now fifteen or twenty kinds of patent punches, and they are made to punch holes in hundreds of different shapes. With the old style punch the ticket sometimes stuck to the punch and it took time to release it, and sometimes it was torn. All the modern punches have a slot or jaw to receive the ticket, and the die or punch shuts through it and returns, leaving the ticket perfectly free in the slot. Most of the large roads now use punches with individual dies. A special punch is assigned not to a train but to a conductor. It is easy, by means of the punch holes, to trace a ticket in all its wanderings.

Crowned With Success.

By improving the kitchen and dining-room service of the Vienna Cafe, Wilson block, Yates street, the experienced manager, in spite of dull times, has succeeded in more than doubling his business since he took charge three months ago. Lunch is served from 12 to 2 at 35 cents; with beer, 50 cents. Dinner from 5.30 to 8 p.m at 50 cents; with wine, 75 cents. Board by the week (three meals a day), $5. Meals a la carte at all hours up to 8 p.m. *

Chambers.

Mr. Justice Walkem, in chambers, made an order in Culverwell, Brooks & Co. vs. Penny that the defendant appear before the registrar to be examined as to what means he has of satisfying the judgment recovered against him in the recent action.

A similar order was made in Mason v. Pierre.

The application of the Nelson Sawmill Company that they be at liberty to sign judgment for $620.07 against the Nelson Electric Company, was adjourned for two weeks.

Speedy Train Service.

The establishment of through train service between Seattle and Minneapolis over the Soo line, Canadian Pacific and Seattle, Lake Shore & Eastern roads will begin before many days, for negotiations between the Canadian Pacific and Receiver Brown for a traffic contract between the former and the Lake Shore are understood to be making good progress. Through trains will begin running over the Soo line, the Canadian Pacific and the Bellingham Bay & British Columbia to New Whatcom next Sunday. Official notice to this effect was received yesterday by Agent E. W. McGinnis in a dispatch from George McL. Brown, the assistant general passenger agent at Vancouver, which says: "Soo Pacific line opens 24th. First through train leaves Whatcom 10:40 a. m. Saturday next, arriving Minneapolis Tuesday morning at 7:15, making run in 68 hours 35 minutes. Tourist and first-class sleeper run through daily. Whatcom to Minneapolis, via North Portal, Winnipeg tourist service cut off commencing Saturday." If, as is almost certain, a contract is made for the Canadian Pacific to run trains through to Seattle over the Lake Shore road, they will come on here by way of Sumas and the time from Minneapolis will be little more than that to Whatcom. This will make this city the actual terminus of three transcontinental roads.—Post-Intelligencer Thursday.

The Mackenzie Concert.

Last evening the centennial concert in commemoration of the notable event of Alexander Mackenzie's exploration of the route across the northwestern portion of the continent was highly successful. Sir William Wallace Society, under whose auspices the concert was given, deserves much credit for the excellent programme and the efficient manner in which it was carried out. The Highland pipers, in "the garb of old Gaul," performed their part very acceptably. Pipers Macdonald and Munro furnished the dance music and Piper Robertson the grand marches. The "Auld Scotch Sangs" were well rendered and received with rapturous applause of encore which brought out the performers a second time in nearly every instance. During the interval between the parts of the programme, Mr. Begg, of Crofter notoriety, who has taken an active part in the Mackenzie centennial commemoration, referred at some length to Sir Alexander Mackenzie's explorations, which led to the first opening of the route to New Caledonia, now British Columbia, the success in the fur trade which followed Mackenzie's efforts, and to the hardships which were endured by the early pioneers. Mr. Begg, as chairman of the centenary committee, thanked the officers and members of Sir William Wallace Society for the assistance they had rendered in procuring the portrait of Sir Alexander Mackenzie then before them in the concert room. The programme was rendered lively throughout by Scotch reels and other dances; the Highland fling and sword dance by Miss Strachan being particularly admired. The tableau of kilted warriors was something unique and when grouped with swords drawn and banner flying under a brilliant light was very effective. The vocal part of the programme was well executed by Mrs. McCandless, Miss Jamieson, Miss Hutcheson, Mrs. Clark and Messrs. Rowlands, Keith and Brownlie. Prof. Quentin, who painted the Mackenzie portrait, contributed French songs, and Sergeant Mellon distinguished himself in his recitation of "Scots Wha Ha'e." Mr. Ernest Wolff's performance on the violin was also enjoyable. It may be concluded with certainty that the recollection of this concert will assist in keeping green the memory of Sir Alexander Mackenzie among British Columbians.

—The annual fair of the North and South Saanich Agricultural Association will take place on October 19 and 20. There will be horse racing on the second afternoon and the usual ball that evening.

—The Gazette of last evening announces the association of the Canadian-Australian Commission and Trading Co'y, Ltd., the trustees of which are Silas Fader, H. P. Shaw and J. T. Carroll, of Vancouver.

—After this all of the services in the Jewish synagogue with a few exceptions, will be in English. The change is made from Hebrew because many of the congregation, particularly the young folk, do not understand it thoroughly.

—Rev. P. McF. Macleod has promised the sealing friends of Ralph Starratt, who died several days ago, to conduct a memorial service on Sunday evening. All of the sealers and all friends of the deceased are invited to be present.

—The following additions have been made to the Kincolith fund: Robert Ward, $25; Joseph Boscowitz, $10; and Hon. F. G. Vernon, $10. The lists are still open at the Bank of British Columbia, Hibben & Co.'s, and the newspaper offices.

—The Bricklayers' and Stonemasons' Unions have served notice on the school board that unless the men named as superintendents of construction on the new school buildings be discharged forthwith and "practical" bricklayers employed they will strike on Monday.

—The locomotive and flat cars recently completed by the Crossen Car Co. of Cobourg, for contractors McKay & Patterson, were brought down from Vancouver and delivered at Sidney yesterday by the Spratt's Ark They will be used in tracklaying when a start has been made from the Sidney end.

—The next meeting of the board of examiners for the examination of candidates for admission to practice as Provincial Land Surveyors in the Province of British Columbia will be held at the office of the Chief Comissioner of Lands and Works, Victoria, on Monday, the 2nd of October

—The contract for Mr. Hardy's new house, facing West Bay, on Esquimalt road, was to-day awarded to Messrs. Bishop & Sherborne by the architect, Mr. J. Gerhard Tiarks. It will be noticed that Mr. Tiarks cals for tenders for a residence to be erected on the Saanich road in to-night's issue.

—There was not a very long session of Police court this morning. Philip Seeback paid a $5 fine for being drunk and avoided 12 days in jail. Edward Christian did the same. John Mateer charged with vagrancy was given until Monday to get witnesses. John Hudson, John Welsh and Joseph Penrose summoned for vagrancy did not appear.

—Mr. McNeill, of the firm of Jones & McNeill, who has part of the Strawberry Vale Farm on the Burnside Road, has established a couple of records in the oats and carrot raising line. From 11 acres he threshed an average of 90 bush. of oats. Last year 10 acres of the same land yielded 1003 bushels This year he also got 30 tons of carrots off one acre.

—News of an accident at Sooke was brought to the city yesterday. Phillips, a settler living near Sooke, began to clear some land by burning off the underbrush and trees. He was not guarding the fire very closely and his little daughter, aged 4, ventured too close to it. Her clothing took fire and she was burned in a terrible manner, and died in agony half an hour later.

—The regular weekly meeting of the W.C.T.U. was held yesterday. Among other things the standing committee's report on the proposed sale of work was read. It stated that the business in connection therewith was progressing very satisfactorily. A report from the Y.W.C.T.U., stating that they had already enrolled twenty members in their new organization was also read.

—A musical and literary entertainment in aid of the Royal Naval Sailors' Rest at Esquimalt is to be given at the Metropolitan Methodist church next Wednesday evening. No Trace Found.

No trace has yet been found of the seal skins stolen from the schooner Ocean Belle on Wednesday night despite the fact that a general lookout is being kept for them by the police and everybody interested in the industry as well. No trace of the boat belonging to Mr. Munsie which was also stolen has been found either. Mr. Hall, owner of the sealskins, has increased the reward to $250 for the simple recovery of the skins.

Marine.

R. P. Rithet & Co., have chartered the American schooner Aida, 507 tons, to load lumber at Moodyville for Shanghai at 40s.

The tug Estelle was in from Nanaimo yesterday.

The tug Lorne brought the bark Ladstock, bound from Honolulu to the Fraser, into Royal Roads yesterday, and is towing her up to her destination to-day. The Ladstock is in ballast and was 14 days on the way up.

The Northern Pacific steamer Victoria is expected in from Yokohama this evening.

The British bark Elizabeth Graham, Capt. A. M. Andresen, sailed into Royal Roads this morning, 33 days from Honolulu in ballast. Capt. Andresen reports the voyage uneventful. She will load lumber at Moodyville for Melbourne. She will tow to Moodyville in a day or so.

Four More Sealers Arrive.

It will not be long now before the entire fleet of sealers will be home. Three arrived to-day, a fourth will be towed in this evening and there are a number off the coast. The schooners in are the Mermaid, Capt. Whitely, with 1,200 skins; Libbie, Capt. Fred Hackett, with 1,630; and Diana, Capt. Neilson, with 1,000 skins. The schooner Dora Sieward, Capt. Lavender, is being towed in. Her catch is reported as 1,865. None of the schooners have much news to report. The Mermaid was struck by a whale going across and severely damaged, the facts of which incident were published at the time. The schooners have been from 17 to 24 days on the way home. The Libbie and Mermaid docked this afternoon and will discharge their cargoes of skins. The Diana is anchored in James Bay.

King's Daughters' Bazaar.

The annual bazaar of the King's Daughters at Christ Church Cathedral school yesterday was a great success, over $200 being cleared. Refreshments were served early in the afternoon, that part of the affair being directed by Miss Finlayson, Miss Pemberton, Mis Langley and others. The booths were pretty. Those in charge were:

Fancy work (Victoria circle)—The Misses Drake, Miss Jenns, Miss Susie Pemmebton.

Fancy work (L. P. H. circle)—Miss Mabel Harvey, Miss Alice Burrows, Miss Maggie Graham, Miss Carrie Hall and Miss Lida King.

Gentlemen's booth—Miss Beaven and Miss Johnston.

Flower booth—The Misses Loewen, Miss Maud Dunsmuir and Miss Harvey.

Toys—Miss Rita McTavish, Miss Irene Newling, Miss Edith Lombard and Miss Evelyn Tilton.

There is no telephone or other communication with Quebec Athletic Association grounds at Quebec. We will do our best to give the public bulletins by games as early as possible. Tuesday's match will be bulletined by us for public information. W. CHRISTIE.

Merchants' Exchange Club.

The board of trade building presented a busy appearance this morning. An important meeting was held in the council chamber there and the directors of the Board of Trade Building Association met in the board's general meeting room to receive the list of subscribers to the proposed Merchants' Exchange Club. A list containing 130 names was presented and after a short discussion it was decided to call a meeting of the subscribers on Friday next, Sept. 29th. Meantime the list will be kept open and those desiring to be enrolled would do well to call on or write to Mr. Elworthy at room 5, Board of Trade building, as it will be impossible for the promoters of the club to see all who wish to join. The support received is quite unexpected and it is possible that after the first meeting the entrance fee may be raised.

BACKBONE.

When you see a fellow mortal
Without fixed or fearless views,
Hanging on the skirts of others,
Walking in their cast-off shoes;
Bowing low to wealth and favor
With abject, uncovered head,
Ready to retract or waver,
Willing to be drove of lead;
Walk yourself with firmer bearing,
Throw your moral shoulders back,
Show your spine has nerve and marrow,
Just the things which his must lack.

When you see a theologian
Hugging close some ugly creed;
Fearing to reject or waiver
Dogmas which his priest may read;
Holding back all noble feeling,
Choking down each manly view,
Caring more for forms or symbols
Than to know the good and true;
Walk yourself with firmer bearing,
Throw your moral shoulders back,
Show your spine has nerve and marrow,
Just the thing which he must lack.

When you see a politician
Crawling through contracted holes,
Begging for some fat position
In the rings or that the polls,
With no sterling manhood in him,
Nothing stable, broad or sound,
Destitute of pluck and ballast,
Double-sided all around;
Walk yourself with firmer bearing,
Throw your moral shoulders back,
Show that you have bone and marrow,
Just the things which must be lack.

A Swordfish's Fight.

Swordfish are unusually plentiful off the coast this summer. The fishermen hunt them with harpoons, spearing them from the decks of small vessels. The fishing smack Mattie and Lena has arrived here after a four days' trip about Block Island with 16 large swordfish, averaging 300 pounds each, and an exciting story of a struggle for life between Henry Cheesebro, one of the crew, and a wounded and maddened swordfish.

Cheesebro had harpooned a big fish off Montauk Point, and, after awaiting the usual length of time, got into a small boat to bring the apparently exhausted fish to the vessel. As soon as Cheesebro approached him and commenced hauling in the line, the fish awoke from his stupor and started in to battle for his life. He began operations by diving so as to spear Cheesebro's boat on coming to the surface. Missing his aim the fish dived again for a second attack.

It was now too late for Cheesebro to retreat, and, defenseless in the frail cedar yawl, he awaited the onslaught. When the fish shot out of the water once more he drove his sword completely through the boat from side to side. The sword entered the boat about three feet from the bow on the port side and came out through the thin plank on the starboard side. Cheesebro had retreated to the stern of the boat in time to avoid the violence of the fierce fish and thus escaped injury.

His plight was seen from the schooner and the vessel headed for the scene of the conflict. By constant bailing Cheesebro kept his frail and disabled craft afloat until succor arrived. A blow on the head finally killed the fish, and Cheesebro's peril as a swordfisherman was over for this time. The fish weighed 338 pounds.—Every Saturday.

British Naval Failures.

One of the most serious pieces of news in connection with the naval manoeuvres is reported by a correspondent. He states that when ordered to accompany the Royal Sovereign at full speed the torpedo catcher Niger could not steam fourteen knots. Now, the Niger is one of the latest of an immense class of vessels, nearly thirty in number, which has been turned out by the admiralty to perform a specific duty. The torpedo catchers are small boats of from 700 to 900 tons, with engines of from 1500 to 4500 horse power. They are intended to be the British reply to a very large force of torpedo boats, which the French have placed in the channel and in the Mediterranean.

The theory is that in anything approaching to a seaway they will run down and destroy the fleetest torpedo boat. Their speed is supposed to vary from nineteen to twenty-one knots. As a matter of fact, says the Pall Mall Gazette, the whole class, with scarcely an exception, is a notorious and dismal failure. Few of the catchers can average sixteen knots; many have failed to maintain an even lower speed. Their funnels become red hot when the boilers are being pushed, and tongues of flame from their furnaces indicate their approach at night. The French have many torpedo boats capable of running twenty-five miles an hour and upward. To set a vessel like the Niger the task of catching one of these boats would be like chasing an express train with a hansom cab. It is to be regretted that in building six ships of the Hawk class, vessels of 215 tons and 3600 horse power, without trying one boat of the series, the admiralty is repeating the fault that has incumbered the navy list with over a score of failures of the Niger type.—London Standard.

The Sultan and Telephones.

A curious objection to the use of the telephone is said to exist in the mind of the Sultan. He will have none of it in any of the cities of his realm, on the ground that his subjects are all too ready to intrigue and conspire against his happiness, and he does not propose to allow the introduction of any device whereby this conspiring can be made easier. It is stated that this prejudice is so deep-rooted that those interested in telephone development have ceased to make any efforts to secure franchises in the land of the Turk.

Oil on the Water.

The use of oil in rough seas is spreading. Captain Bower, while on a voyage recently from New York to the Mediterranean in the steamship Ponca, encountered a strong gale with very high seas. He says: "The vessel was deeply laden with grain and became unmanageable. We were running before the seas and shipping large quantities of water, until two smal bags filled with colza oil were put over on each side of the bridge. This oil was found to be too light and of little use; but after olive oil was put in the bags no more water was shipped, and the decks became almost as dry as in fine weather, although the gale continued for two days. The vessel was drawing 26.1-2 feet of water, and if we had not used oil I do not think she could have withstood the storm." Another instance is that of Captain William Peake, master of the schooner J. F. Krantz, who, while making a passage from Port Spain, Trinidad, to Boston, met a terrific gale off Cape Hatteras, and had the following experience: "The sails were blown away, men washed from the pumps, and boats and other things above the decks wrecked by the heavy seas. I was compelled to head southward and send under bare poles. Then I thought of oil, and determined to see what effect it would have on the sea. Two wooden ten gallon kegs containing boiled linseed oil were lashed to the quarters of the vessel. The oil was allowed to ooze out through two smal holes in the heads of the kegs. The effect was all that could be desired. After the oil had spread no oil came on board, the men returned to the pumps, the vessel was pumped out and the decks were cleaned up. During the sixteen hours in which the oil was used eight gallons were expended." An examination of thousands of reports like the preceding ones demonstrates that a small quantity, say two quarts per hour, of thick and heavy oils, especially those of animal and vegetable origin, when allowed to drop into the sea, soon spreads over its surface, forming an oily lager, within the area of which the waves do not break.

SALMAGUNDI.

Dr. Holden of the Lick observatory is taken to task in the scientific columns of the London Chronicle for his contribution on the "Suicide of a Rattlesnake." The paper was contributed to a European scientific publication. Professor Ray Lancaster, no mean authority on biology, doubts altogether the interpretation put on the incident. He says there is no proof of scorpions and snakes committing suicide, and that the venom of a snake has little if any effect upon another ophidian. He thinks that the bite which suggested the idea of suicide must have been inflicted to ease itself of some local troubles, quite dissociated from mental worry or ophidian philosophy. In other words, it may have been a flea, a burrowing parasite, or neuralgia, but suicide is a cure too subtle for the snake's mind.

One does not often meet a neater characterization than that of the word slang attributed by Mr. Brander Matthews to Professor Lounsbury of Yale: "Slang is an effort on the part of the users of language to say something more vividly, strongly, concisely than the language itself permits." It may be aded that when the effort succeeds the word lives; when it fails the word is soon marked as "an archaic vulgarism."

It is very rarely that one heam of a German professor that he has left a little fortune. It is therefore, a surprise to learn that the enlightened professor of philosophy, Dr. J. Frohschammer, whose death was recently announced, has bequeathed a large amount of money to the University of Munich for the foundation of scholarships.

The editor of the British Medical Journal, after insisting on the point that cholera is communicated only by drinking water polluted with the faeces of the disease, traces its dissemination from its great endemic centres in Hurdwar (East India) and Mecca, by the agency of the pilgrims who visit these shrines, contract the disease and carry it to their homes, which, by the contamination of the drinking water, become fresh centres for its diffusion over wider areas. It is remarked, incidentally, that improved facilities of travel tend still further to facilitate the spread of the disease.

The expression, "deaf as an adder," is from Psalms of David, where it appears in the following form: "Their poison is like the poison of serpents. They are like the deaf adder that stoppeth her ear, which will not hearken to the voice of charmers, charming ever so wisely." East Indian travellers tell us that there is a widely prevailing supposition in the East to the effect that both the viper and the asp stop their ears when the charmer is uttering his incantations or playing his music, by turning one ear to the ground and twisting the point of the tail into the other.

Donnybrook is on the outskirts of the city of Dublin, but Donnybrook fair ground is no longer the friendly fighting ground of former days. Once the tents made of wattles, with patchwork quilts or blankets or old petticoats spread over them, held rows of tables made of doors placed on mounds of clay. The benches, too, rested on the same uncertain foundation, and when the young Irishmen grew unsteady the benches sent them all down to the floor. Out on the green there was fighting and sports and at night the fiddles played jigs for the jolly young people. It appears from accounts given by strangers who visited Donnybrook Fair almost a hundred years ago that there was good reason for the world-wide meaning given to the mere expression "Donnybrook Fair." But its glories have departed, and it is many a long day since the cheerful shillaly was wielded around Donnybrook castle.

Search lights have been indispensable to steamers of all classes and in military and naval operations. By their use objects a mile away can be revealed and illumined in the darkest night, and their powerful beam of light can be thrown in any direction. One of the earliest applications of the search light in marine work was to vessels passing throught the Suez canal. Formerly the passage could only be made in daylight, and was very tedious and costly. Now the electric light is at the service of every ship as it enters the canal, and the journey is, in nearly every case, pursued uninterruptedly. A most excellent innovation has been made by the Suez canal authorities, who have pronounced that it shall be obligatory after October 1 next on all vessels passing throught the canal by light to employ an apparatus for dividing the light of the projector into two divergent rays. Approaching vessels may by this means travel right up to each other without their respective helmsmen being blinded. The diverging apparatus which is to be used has been devised by one of the agents of the company.

Italians, as is well known, are partial to harmless snakes, and have no objection to eating them cooked. A frittura, composed of the common wood serpent's flesh, is even regarded as a dainty by the lower orders in Rome, Florence and Naples, and is often served up to them in the dingy restaurants. Parisians of the inferior classes are also great eaters of fried snakes, but unwittingly so, for the reptiles are palmed off on them for eels. It is probable, however, that even if the members of the poorer classes who occasionally indulge in fried or stewed eels were apprised of the fraud practiced at their expense they would evince no loathing nor even lack of appetite, seeing that they are ready to devour not only horseflesh, but meat of the mule, donkey and dog any day of the week.

Falcons as Messengers.

Falconry may hereafter be restored, it seems, though not as a sport, but as part of that terribly serious business, war. A Russian officer, Captain Smoiloff, has been taming falcons to serve as dispatch carriers. The falcon has several advantages over the carrier pigeon. Not only is he a more warlike bird than the meek cousin of the dove, but he is swifter in flight and capable of greater endurance. The greatest swiftness ever known to be attained by the carrier pigeon is 15 (German) miles in an hour; but this is the rate of the ordinary flight of the falcon.

D'Aubusson, in his work on the "Falconry of the Middle Ages" tells several anecdotes of the extraordinary powers of the falcon and length and swiftness of flight. For instance, a falcon which was sent from the Canary Islands to the Duke of Lerma in Spain made the return flight from Andalusia to Teneriffe in sixteen hours, which was at the express speed of sixteen (German) miles an hour. A German mile is not far short of five English miles, so that the speed of this falcon must have been at the rate of about 75 miles an hour.

A further advantage of the falcon over the pigeon is the great weight it can carry. It is well known that a very slight burden is an oppression to the poor pigeon, so that dispatches are reduced in size by photographic copies, in order to reduce the weight for the feeble little carrier. Captain Smoiloff says that he has found that a falcon can carry a weight of four Russian pounds, or 1640 grams (thirty grams go to our ounce), without diminishing its power or swiftness in flight. Besides, the carrier pigeon may fall a prey to the falcon, while there is small danger of any other bird taking the carrier falcon a prisoner.—Westminster Gazette.

The Aberdeen Pasha.

There was three years ago in Kensington infirmary, says a correspondent of a contemporary, an old man of 90 years of age. For all the writer knows he may be there still, but he told him the following story. He is an engineer by trade and belongs to Glasgow. In the Russo-Turkish war he was chief engineer on a Turkish ironclad in the Danube. One day something had gone wrong with the machinery, and Hobart Pasha came on board. The engineer was busy at the repairs when he heard the voice of the admiral up on deck. The next minute he felt a slap on the shoulder, with an exclamation in guid braid Scotch "Ye're makin' a fine job, my lad; it'll dae rale weel." "Guid preserve's a'," says the engineer, "whaur dae you come frae?" "Dod, man," says Hobart Pasha, "did ye no' ken I belang to Aberdeen? Hobart's my surname, and after I cam' here they stuck on 'Pasha to mak' folk think I was a Turk."

THE TREASURE CHEST.

Reports From the Mining Regions of the Kootenays.

Nelson Tribune.

Another 40 ton lot of ore has been shipped from the No. 1 mine at Ainsworth. It goes to the Tacoma smelter.

Forest fires have caused so much smoke to settle on the lake in the vicinity of Kaslo that it is difficult at times in that town to dodge a creditor.

Prof. George C. Tilden of the school of mines, Golden, Colorado, is making a tour of the Slocan mines in company with F. M. Chadbourne of Nelson.

George Hughes has struck a streak of ore in the Mountain Chief mine, two miles from New Denver, which assays over 3000 ounces of silver to the ton.

The Pilot Bay smelter people have thrown up their bonds on the Brennand and Russell groups of mineral claims in the Kaslo district on account of the low price and uncertainty of silver.

Reports of disturbances by Indians come from the valley of the Kootenay river. They seem to act as if settlers had no rights worth respecting. A few doses of cold lead might have a good effect.

A. B. Irwin, who for several years has been manager of the Spokane Cab Company, the district messenger service, and late chief clerk and manager of the Hotel Spokane, is now at Kaslo in the capacity of secretary of the Washington Mining Company.

Owing to the refusal of the Great Northern railway to put in a spur at Bonner's Ferry, all ore from the Slocan country will be shipped by way of Nelson hereafter. Shippers say that the Nelson route is as cheap as the other, and no vexatious delays occur in making transfers.

It is reported that the government agent has ordered work commenced on a wharf at New Denver. It is to be erected at the most exposed point in front of the town, a point at which steamboat men say a boat cannot make a landing when the wind blows. If built at that point, the wharf would be practically valueless.

"Alf" Woods, a printer and placer miner, who has made his headquarters at Nelson since early last spring, leaves this week for Toronto, a place where placer mines are unknown, but where print shops are more numerous than in the Kootenay country. Mr. Woods will take in the World's Fair en route, and will probably engage in a newspaper venture on his return to Toronto.

N. Fitzstubbs, government agent, returned to Nelson on Wednesday from a trip to Nakusp, New Denver and Kaslo. He reports the New Denver wagon road graders strung out a mile to the west of Three Forks and right-of-way and bridge men still farther advanced. He also says that men have been put to work repairing the wagon road east of Watson, the expense to be shared by the government and the teamsters, George Hughes representing the latter.

(Kaslo-Slocan Examiner.)

Word came in Thursday that the men working on the Lucky Jim mine have struck the lead in the lower tunnel.

P. J. Savage bought of Graham and Flaherty a one-sixth interest in the Cascade claim on Grisley creek for the sum of $450 this week.

Fifty-three men are at work on the wagon road about three miles east of Three Forks. No expense is being spared to put in a splendid road.

Mr. McNaught was expected to arrive from Seattle this week, and it is almost a certainty that he will take up his option on the Grady group of mines, and put a large number of men to work developing.

The Nakusp road is being pushed through rapidly, and the track will be laid to the head of Slocan lake by January 1st. The terminus of the Nakusp road will be New Denver, while a spur will be built to Three Forks.

Ore hauling continues unabated. At Hughes' warehouse is about 170 tons from the different mines as follows: 76 tons of Mountain Chief ore, 40 tons of Freddie Lee ore, 50 tons Noble Five ore, and smaller amounts from various other mines. While the Wellington and Blue Bird have 40 tons at the wharf.

Forty tons of Blue Bird ore came in Thursday on the State of Idaho consigned to San Francisco. This shipment is the first of a series which will aggregate about 1800 tons from the mine. Shipments are to be made from other mines at once. Mr. Casey, agent of the Great Northern, has received information that speedy handling of ore at this point will in all likelihood bring nearly all the ore this way.

The Juna claim in the Whitewater basin owned by Ira Jenkins, J. S. Campbell and Dempsey, has been attracting considerable attention of late owing to the reported rich gold find there. The owners of this claim have exhibited rich specimens of gold quartz on several occasions in the past two weeks, asserting that they were taken from the Juna, but since the Golden Eagle fake became known, people are just a little suspicious of rich propositions.

Placer mining on Hall Creek, this season has not been a success. Several claims have been abandoned after the owners had put in from six to eight weeks' work. However, some likely spots in the canyon are now receiving attention. Three claims are located there. Captain Duncan and party have built a flume at the mouth of the canyon and report fair pay, with better prospects when bedrock is reached.

Nelson Miner.

"Nearly all the Coeur d' Alene mines will be working on their full capacity within a few weeks, and we will have a pay roll of over $300,000 a month, over two-thirds of which will be expended in Spokane." This statement was made by a mine owner to a Spokane newspaper man.

The Nakusp and Slocan road will be further advanced this winter than most people think. Not only are the contractors under heavy bonds to have the road completed to the head of the lake this winter, but the road must be consructed to the Three Forks by May 1st. To accomplish this the work of grading must be done before winter. The work is being pushed along with the greatest dispatch.

Indignant Settlers.

A correspondent of the Columbian, writing from Okanagan, says: "Much indignation is expressed at Boundary creek and Kettle river at the refusal of the government to construct the road from Osoyoos, for which a special vote of $8000 was made. This money is evidently being frittered away on a useless road from Dog Lake, solely in the interest of a townsite boom scheme there, in which certain C.P.R. officials and others prominent in nearly all townsite schemes in British Columbia are interested. This is a matter which Opposition members would do well to look into and bring up in the House. Outside of those having a finger in the public purse, there is not a government supporter in the district."

Albert Lackner's Odd Life.

From Vienna comes a strange story—a modern counterpart in humble life of the adventures of Achilles at the court of Lycomedes. A detective was instructed to look for a certain Albert Lackner, 26 years old, who was wanted in the Conscription Office. He was supposed to live with his father, a carpenter, who was not at home when the detective called, but there was an apprentice who informed him that Albert Lackner was cook in a restaurant in another part of the town. The detective went to the address given and learned that there was a cook Lackner in the restaurant, but that the name was Sophie and that it was a young woman. And so it turned out to be. Albert Lackner had learned the confectioner's trade, and failing at 17 to find employment he dressed as a girl and obtained, through his sister, a service-book for Sophie Lackner, and had since then faithfully fulfilled the duties of a maid of all work and cook in a number of private families. He had given satisfaction everywhere and would probably have stayed in the same family the whole time only he had to present himself periodically in the Conscription Office to be examined, where he always proved too delicate for the army.

Young Lackner left service for the purpose, and afterwards had to wait until his hair grew long enough to fasten a false plait to it. The judge who examined the case asked him how he managed about dressing, and Lackner showed that he dressed in half the time any woman ever dressed in. His last mistress had been asked what she took the girl Sophie to be, why she was so disdainful to her lovers, and said she might as well take a walk with the baker, who was a nice hard-working young man. Not to arouse suspicion Lackner did go for an excursion with the baker, declaring when he came home that he was not anxious to have a sweetheart. Of course he never took service anywhere but where a single servant was kept. Only once, when he was very young, he occupied one room with a very young nursemaid, who never found him out. Several mistresses in whose services he was were so pleased with him that they would take him back to-morrow, as they never met such a hard-working, good-humored girl before. The judge had to find guilty of deceiving the authorities, but only sentenced him to 24 hours' arrest.—London Daily News.

A Comic Opera Episode.

Miss Brandram was speaking of the nervousness on the first night of a new production, and she said that an absurd contretemps nearly threw her off her balance during the first night of "Ruddigore." She continued: "Perhaps you remember that as Dame Hannah in 'Ruddigore' I have to go on with a small dagger, with which I am supposed to threaten the wicked baronet's life. When my turn came round the dagger had disappeared, and was nowhere to be found. Nothing would induce me to go on without my property, and although Mr. Barrington implored me to appear without it, I was resolute. Of course there was a terrible stage wait, and at last Mr. Barrington grew desperate, and, forcing something into my hand, absolutely pushed me on to the stage. And what do you think it was?" asked Miss Brandram, laughing at the reminiscence. "Of all things it was a large gas key! I contrived, however, to conceal the absurd makeshift from the audience, but when I had to hand my supposed dagger to Mr. Grossmith, he most unkindly gave me away. 'How can I kill myself with this thing?' he said, holding up the gas key in its entirety to the audience. Of course there was a perfect howl of laughter, and for some minutes we were unable to continue." Miss Brandram, as well as Mr. Barrington, has been a member of the Savoy company for 15 years. "Well do I remember the opening night in the Opera Comique, before the Savoy was built, and the excitement with which the 'Sorcerer' was received, and poor Mrs. Howard Paul's dancing as Lady Sangazure."

Petroleum to Cure Diphtheria.

Paris medical men continue to give their opinions vaguely on the treatment of diphtheria by petroleum as carried out by Dr. Flahout, a provincial physician. All unite in testimony as to the fact that such a treatment is by no means original. Dr. Fauval, a celebrated throat specialist, says that in pulmonary maladies the application of pure petroleum has produced splendid results. Moreover, during the American war of secession wounds were dressed with the oil. The doctor, however, counsels mothers whose children are afflicted with the dreadful malady of diptheria or croup to put their trust for the present in pure lemon juice, which should be sponged or brushed over the throats of the sufferers.—London Daily Telegraph.

He Was Not Disappointed or Deceived.

Mr. Jonathan Nichols, of Harborville, King's county, Nova Scotia, says: "I have tested it and have not been disappointed or deceived." Mr. Nichols for a long period was afflicted with heart trouble and nervousness. He failed to find a cure from the ordinary medicines of our times, but was induced to try Paine's Celery Compound, nature's health-giver, and after a short treatment was cured. Mr. Nichols writes as follows:

"I would like to add my testimony to those you are receiving in favor of Paine's Celery Compound. I have used four bottles of your great remedy for heart trouble and nervousness, and find it is all you claim it to be. Paine's Celery Compound is well worthy of the name it carries—'the great health-giver;' it is a wonderful remedy for the nerves and blood and I would advise all sufferers to use it."

The Big Wheel.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—The Ferris Wheel will go to New York city at the close of the Columbian Exposition. This much was informally decided upon at a meeting of the board of directors held here to-day. A formal proposition was presented from the Belgian government for its erection as an attraction at the Brussels exposition of next year, unlimited ground space being guaranteed, with the additional proviso that no concession privileges or proportion of the receipts would be demanded. In view, however, of the enormous expense that would be attached to the conveyance of the plant across the water—three freight steamers being necessary for the transportation of the material—it was decided that without a government guarantee it would be injudicious for the bondholders to accept the proposition. The majority of the board was in favor of the acceptance of some one of the offers coming from New York. The question will be finally decided at a meeting to be held next week, but the sentiment of the directors is decidedly in favor of re-erecting the giant structure in New York.

One Honest Man.

To the Editor of the Victoria Times:—Please inform your readers that I will mail free to all sufferers the means by which I was restored to health and manly vigor after years of suffering from Nervous Weakness. I was robbed and swindled by the quacks until I nearly lost faith in mankind, but thanks to heaven, I am now well, vigorous and strong. I have nothing to sell and no scheme to extort money from anyone whomsoever, but being desirous to make this certain cure known to all, I will send free and confidential to any one full particulars of just how I was cured. PRESBYTERY CENSURES HIM

Rev. Mr. Macleod Censured for Conducting Religious Services

AND GRANTING DEMIT CERTIFICATES

Mr. Macleod Appeals From Both Judgments to Synod—What Was Said and Done at Last Night's and This Morning's Meetings

The Presbytery last night censured Rev. R. McF. McLeod for conducting services in the old Methodist church. The resolution censuring the ex-pastor of St. Andrew's declared that the services were irregular and calculated to bring the laws of the church into disrepute and impair the interests of Presbyterianism in Victoria. The resolution enjoined Rev. Mr. McLeod to discontinue holding such meetings till the issuing of the case of the petitioners of the proposed new church, who have applied for organization as a Presbyterian congregation.

Rev. Mr. McLeod immediately protested against the verdict of the Presbytery and the appeal will be heard before the synod next May.

When the Times went to press yesterday Moderator McRae, of Nanaimo, had left the chair to speak. He said the whole affair was of considerable trouble and annoyance and was most unfortunate. Considerable energy, time and money had been spent. But the question was before the meeting and they must grapple with it. Mr. McLeod was charged with holding meetings in a church in Victoria without permission. For five Sundays services were held in the old Methodist church and also in the theatre. This was without the consent of the Presbytery, though the Presbytery was the only power that could call such a body into existence. This did not look like Presbyterianism, but much resembled Congregationalism. A loyal minister of the church would not act thus. Not only did Mr. McLeod preach in the church, but in the theatre.

Mr. McLeod rose to a point of order, stating that the charge bore date of Sept. 10th, and that the theatre services had been dealt with at Nanaimo.

Rev. A. B. Winchester, chairman, ruled that the point was well taken if Mr. McRae did not intend by reference to the theatre to throw light on the charge under discussion.

Moderator McRae answered that he did not wish to speak on the theatre affair. The whole proceedings of Mr. McLeod were unpresbyterian.

Dr. Campbell said that the action of the Victoria ministers was taken with a great deal of pain. But that to be loyal to the Presbyterian church of Canada they had to see that the church law was carried out. He was sorry to see so many personalities introduced. He himself had comparatively taken a back seat in the McLeod troubles, and had done so because outsiders would have said that he and Mr. McLeod were at antitheses. This was untrue. But he, as an ordained minister of the Presbyterian church, was bound to see that the church laws were carried out and would take such action as he had taken even against his own brother. Otherwise he would step down and out of the Presbyterian church. The services conducted by Mr. McLeod were contrary to church law.

Clerk of the Presbytery McRae also said that one of the most painful duties of his life was to attach his signature to the remonstrance against Mr. McLeod holding religious meetings. If he had consulted a personal feeling he would not have signed the remonstrance. To be true to the vows he had taken as a minister he felt himself bound to sign it. The Presbytery was compelled to follow church law whether parties felt it a hardship or not. The proceedings of Mr. McLeod were without precedent. Mr. McLeod before he severed his connection with St. Andrew's church, was interested in the establishment of another congregation without the sanction of the Presbytery. Mr. McLeod had admitted in Nanaimo that in holding meetings in Victoria theatre he had acted wrongly and apologized for it. Yet upon returning to Victoria he continued his action. Was this not almost tantamount to a schism? The Presbytery were bound to vindicate the law of the church. They were there in defense of the interests of Presbyterianism in British Columbia and in the Dominion, and interests for which they ought to sacrifice all other interests and even their lives. The eye of the whole Presbyterian church of Canada was upon this Presbytery. If Mr. McLeod's position was correct the appointment of a committee by the Nanaimo Presbbytery was a farce and the meeting called for October was useless.

Rev. A. B. Winchester said that if any one was free from the groundless and baseless assertion of personality he was. When the question had gained such a momentum he stood up, not as a foe to any man, but in defense of the doctrines of Presbyterianism. The Nanaimo Presbytery had been lenient and that leniency had been cast up against them. The whole organization of the so-called Central church was illegal. If he had not signed the remonstrance he would have been false to his vows and his church. If it were not a right thing it was done done openly. It was not tyranny. More than leniency had been shown Mr. McLeod.

Alex. Shaw of Nanaimo referred to the scriptural quotation that "he who is without sin let him cast the first stone." He could cast a stone at no man. He could not see that he was very wrong in acting who had the salvation of souls at heart. Mr. McLeod might have violated the laws of the church, but his justification was the salvation of souls. However, he did not think that a minister without a charge was at liberty to form a congregation.

Dr. Robertson sympathized with the Presbytery, and also with Mr. McLeod. The Presbytery had not been severe. They were there to carry out church law. It was unfortunate that these services had been conducted, but he did not think that they should be summarily stopped. All considered, he thought the action of the proposed new congregation was to make to peace and order.

Rev. Mr. McLeod said that it was an unfortunate fact that there were not more members of the Presbytery present. Too much latitude was taken in speaking of the Nanaimo affair. What he admitted in Nanaimo was that it was an error of judgment on his part while pastor of St. Andrew's to preach in the theatre. He never dreamed that the gentlemen present at Nanaimo had objections against preaching per se, but only of preaching while he held a charge. He could not see why he could not preach to a body of people who wanted him to preach to them. The petitioners did not think it was wrong for him to give them supply pending their recognition as a congregation. Presbyterian church law was unwritten. It might have been wiser for them not to have taken a name and have met as a congregation of no particular denomination. But to be loyal to Presbyterianism they applied for organization. The Presbytery had never told them to stop although knowing of the existence of such meetings. Temporary organization of these brethren was a different thing to them organising as a Presbyterian church. They had simply organized for proper management pending the action of the Presbytery upon the application for organization. The Presbytery was not only the custodian of the rights of congregations and ministers, but also of the rights of all individual members of the Presbyterian church in good standing, as were the members of the new congregation. If the Presbytery found against the proposed congregation their rights did not cease till the supreme court of the church had pronounced on the subject. Had the Presbytery the right to keep away a large number of people from the Presbyterian church? If the supreme court pronounced against them then it would be for the petitioners to disband as a congregation or to seek alliance with some other Christian body. The censure attached to the petitioners as well as himself.

Voices—No! No!

Mr. McLeod asked how they could be separated. He was charged with preaching to them.

Dr. Campbell—We are not considering the petitioners. It is Mr. McLeod's case.

Mr. McLeod continued and said that since there was nothing illegal in their meeting there was nothing illegal in his preaching.

Clerk of the Presbytery McRae—That does not follow.

Mr. McLeod said that he was thrust out of St. Andrew's and left in the city without a charge.

The Moderator—I would not say thrust out. It will appear bad in the papers.

Mr. McLeod said that he would withdraw that term and substitute another word.

Rev. D. A. McRae wished to obliterate an erroneous impression that Rev. Mr. McLeod was a martyr. That idea had got abroad and outsiders thought that Mr. McLeod was being persecuted.

Mr. McLeod protested that he had never meant that impression.

Mr. McRae said that he had a personal letter from Mr. McLeod in which he had used such term speaking of members of St. Andrew's congregation.

There was a passage-at-arms between Mr. McLeod and Mr. McRae on this subject, after which Rev. Mr. McRae proceeded with his address, but soon cause of the petitioners and objected to such a printed circular with the headline Central Presbyterian church.

Mr. Falconer, a member of the new congregation, protested that he was one of the petitioners and objected to such a document being used unless they were given a chance to go into the affair.

Clerk of the Presbytery McRae said that the Presbytery did not know Mr. Falconer. He was simply one of the audience. The moderator ruled that the petitioners had no right to speak and that Mr. McLeod alone was before the bar of the Presbytery.

Mr. McLeod replied that if that were the ruling he protested against the use of such papers.

Mr. Falconer again rose to his feet. Mr. Bethune and others were also on their feet and the moderator had to call for order. Order was restored and Mr. McRae concluded his speech. A committee was then appointed to confer with Mr. McLeod to introduce, if possible, a resolution which would be amicable to all concerned, the committee and Mr. McLeod to meet during the time of recess for dinner and evening session.

The Presbytery reassembled at 8 o'clock, but it was over half an hour before the committee reported. In the meantime Dr. Crompton, C. R. Lockhart and Mr. Falconer were requested to confer with Mr. McLeod in the anteroom. The report was that no amicable resolution could be arrived at. Rev. D. McRae then read the resolution of censure.

The representatives of the proposed new congregation were granted the privilege of speaking shortly to the point.

Dr. Crompton was first called upon. He said that he did not regard it as a privilege. The petitioners had a right to the floor and objected on behalf of the petitioners.

The moderator said he could not object for the petitioners.

Dr. Crompton—Then why was the document of the petitioners read?

Mr. McLeod said that they desired to share the responsibility.

Clerk of the Presbytery McRae said that Mr. McLeod alone was before the Presbytery. If the petitioners were allowed status it would lead to inextricable confusion.

Dr. Crompton then refused to speak further.

Mr. Lockhart said that Mr. McLeod had not received a cent for preaching and that the circulars referred to had been got out by himself.

Mr. Falconer said that at Nanaimo he had said that it was intended to hold services and to call the new church the Central Presbyterian church, and everything went on well till the injunction came along.

The moderator said that Mr. Falconer could not go on on that line.

Mr. Falconer thought that he was acting rightly as a member of the new church, and he asked if Mr. McLeod could not conduct a memorial service to sealers which the church committee had arranged for next Sabbath?

Rev. D. A. McRae asked who was chairman of the new church meeting on the 4th inst. Mr. Falconer had said that Mr. McLeod had nothing to do with the affair.

Mr. Falconer still maintained that Mr. McLeod had nothing to do with the affair of the circular letter, but when pressed by Mr. McRae stated that he meant that Mr. McLeod as chairman had nothing to do with the printing and preparation of the motion.

Mr. McLeod rose and said that he had been requested to guide the meeting. He was pressed to do so because he was conversant with the conduct of church meetings.

Some further discussion took place and the motion was put and carried. Mr. McLeod immediately rose and gave notice of appeal to the synod.

The meeting closed with the benediction.

When the presbytery met this morning there was a rather lively scene. Rev. D. A. McRae, the moderator, after opening the meeting with prayer, resigned the chair to Dr. Campbell and rose on the floor of the Presbytery to a question of privilege. Mr. McRae stated that Mr. McLeod at yesterday's Presbytery had stated that he had never let the impression go abroad that he was persecuted. The speaker had said that Mr. McLeod had even said so in a private letter. Mr. McLeod had denied the statement and was prepared to prove it. He had with him a letter written to Alex. Shaw, in which Mr. McLeod had insinuated that he was being persecuted by the local Presbyterian clergy. He would read the letter.

Mr. McLeod said that it was with burning indignation that he learned that private letters were introduced. He called the speaker to order.

Mr. Winchester said that he hurled back the baseless slander of burning indignation. Mr. McLeod had made an undignified use of the letter addressed by the ministers of Victoria to Mr. McLeod asking him to desist from holding meetings. Mr. McLeod himself had written to him in a similar strain as to Mr. Shaw. This bore out Mr. McRae's remarks.

Mr. McLeod asked if he had no rights in the matter. If Mr. Winchester wished to formulate charges and bring up private letters he should give the proper notice. Only what was in connection with the business in hand could come up in this meeting. It was only to make a further attack on him.

Mr. Winchester—I ask that the words "further attack" be taken down. The character of every member of the Presbytery was assailed.

Rev. D. A. McRae said that Mr. McLeod had brought it on himself. The statements the speaker had made yesterday were correct and Mr. McLeod had denied them. They had been proved this morning.

The subject was dropped and the business of the meeting taken up. The business was to deal with the charge against Rev. Mr. McLeod of issuing demits to members of St. Andrew's congregation without sanction of the session.

Moderator McRae said that Mr. McLeod had issued 59 such demits and 46 of them were included in the petition for the formation of a new congregation. Mr. McRae linked together Mr. McLeod's farewell sermon and remarks used by him then with the issuing of demits. He would draw up a resolution.

Mr. McLeod asked was it usual to draw up a resolution before hearing the party attacked.

Acting Moderator Winchester said that the placing of the resolution was to simply bring the matter properly before the Presbytery. Mr. McRae had a right to speak first and then present a motion.

Mr. McLeod said technically it might be correct, but he thought that it would prejudice matters to put it before he had been heard in his own defense.

Acting Moderator Winchester ruled that that was a matter of opinion.

Rev. D. A. McRae moved a resolution "that the Presbytery record its decided disapproval of Mr. McLeod's action in issuing demits to members of St. Andrew's congregation." Mr. McLeod had himself said at congregational meetings that it needed every man, woman and child in St. Andrew's congregation to hold the church together, and yet in the face of this Mr. McLeod had issued these demits.

Mr. McLeod said that he was applied to personally by members of St. Andrew's for demit certificates during the month of August. They were going away and it would be a hardship to them. He read from the Blue Book that between meetings of the session the moderator of the session had power to grant certificates of disjunction and report to the next meeting of the session. He was moderator and argued that he had the authority to sign such certificates. He had taken the certificates or demits to Mr. Bethune, clerk of the session, and asked him to sign them if he thought proper. Mr. Bethune did not wish to sign them and he left the stubs with Mr. Bethune. The speaker had acquainted Moderator McRae of the Presbytery with these facts.

Mr. Bethune rose and said that the session was always willing to meet and there was no reason for Mr. McLeod to take such action.

Moderator Winchester said that Mr. McLeod had the floor.

Mr. McLeod said he thought that "if there were two hostile elements in the church it would be better if they were separated. He had never been told that his services were no longer wanted at St. Andrew's and had resigned. When he left the church there were those of the congregation who desired his ministry and had withdrawn from St. Andrew's, and they asked him to supply. He claimed that he was acting legally in granting certificates, although, perhaps, it might have been wiser for him to have acted differently. Nine-tenths of the certificates that had been received by him were only signed by the minister.

Dr. Campbell said that the Blue Book did not mean that certificates could be granted wholesale. He thought that it was very peculiar that 59 persons should ask for their certificates at the same time.

Dr. Robertson moved that the action of Mr. McLeod be ratified by the session and that this be added to the resolution of Mr. McRae. This would put the stamp of validity upon the demits. He thought that it was a serious matter to disjoin a sixth of the members of a congregation without consent of the session. It was an error of judgment on Mr. McLeod's part and had a bad appearance, and the Presbytery should record its disapproval of such conduct.

Clerk of the Presbytery McRae asked how could the Presbytery endorse such action when it had been stated that members had received certificates without asking for them.

Dr. Robertson then thought that the members of the congregation should be granted certificates if they apply to the session for them.

A rider was attached to the resolution that the Presbytery recommend the session to confirm the certificates unless it appear that any were issued in error.

The resolution as amended was acceptable to all and passed, Mr. McLeod protesting against the judgment of the Presbytery. He appealed on the one point that it was legal for him to grant demits and he would like the question decided by a higher tribunal. The appeal was recorded and Dr. Campbell, Rev. D. A. McRae and Mr. Bethune were appointed a committee to answer the appeal before the synod.

Moderator McRae then adjourned the meeting and pronounced the benediction.
